Famous black chess players

Chess is a game for everyone, and easier than you might think. You can learn the chess rules here! Select to play as white or black chess configuration pawns - white always moves first. The first move is performed by the pawn or knight. The knights are the only pieces allowed to cross the others in the whole board and move them two squares and cross one on the board. In the chess, the pawn is free to advance of two squares in the initial move, however, can advance only of one square at a time. In addition, it can attack only forward and diagonally. After this opening to the chess game, the goal is to get the rest of your pawns out to attack the King of the opponent while protecting yours. Other pawns are free to move along the chessboard in the following ways: Bishop can move in any diagonal direction in an unlimited number of available spaces on the board. The towers can do the same, but in any direction not diagonally on the board. In chess, queens (your most precious pawn) can move in any direction in an unlimited number of available spaces. Kings can move in any direction, however, only one square at a time on the chessboard. In chess, once the King is threatened, he is put in "check". The player with the King in danger must use the next move to move him to the chessboard, attack the threatening pawns or block him out of the check. Otherwise, it could mark the end of the chess game with the King placed in "checkmate", which means that it is impossible to avoid an attack on the King and that the player who puts the King in this position wins the online chess game. Fun facts about chess - The longest chess game could be 5,949 moves. - The first board with light alternating squares and dark was used in Europe in 1090. - In chess, the term "Checkmate" comes from the Persian phrase "Shah Mat", meaning "the King is dead." - It is estimated that more than 600 million people play online chess and around the world. - Norwegian Magnus Carlsen is the current world champion of chess. Copyright Å© 2021 InfoSpace Holdings, LLC, a System1 Company Wandering in the bathroom with your smartphone to control the best way to beat your opponent is probably the worst move you can make in a chess game, but this is the charge moved to the great master Igors Rausis after he was allegedly caught in flagrante Friday, July 12. Rausis was playing in a tournament in Strasbourg, France, when he went to the bathroom for a break. Shortly after, a smartphone was found in the cubicle, with the chess player who assigned a statement confirming that the device was his. Pressure on the reader increased when social media users started circulating a photo, also published by The Times, which claimed to show Rausis during the swim break on Friday: the image, it can be seen to check his phone while sitting on the closed cabinet cover. The Latvian-cuzzo player later seemed to admit that he used his phone during the bath break, saying Chess.com, "I just lost my head yesterday," and adding, "I played my last chess game already." However, the publication noted that at this stage it is not yet clear whether it was receiving assistance from software or perhaps other means. While there is no proven evidence that suggests that the 58-year-old Rausis used a smartphone to help his chess performance before Friday, chess fans long suspected his behavior after noticing his player score improving at an unusually fast speed. In fact, Yuri Garrett of the World Chess Federation (FIDE) revealed on Friday that officials have been following for months "a player" after using software designed to alert them of unusual performance and trends among players. Phones have been banned at chess tournaments for several years, with some high-profile events requiring players to go through metal detectors before starting a game. However, this does not prevent a phone from being hidden in a bathroom before starting a game. The FIDE ethical committee is now examining the Rausis case to decide how to proceed. Commenting on the problem of cheating competitively – whether with a smartphone or other means – David Llada, chief communication officer of FIDE, said Digital Trends: "Looking at the big picture, I'm relieved to say that the number of cases is minimal," adding, "It is, by far, a much smaller problem that doping is in other sports." In fact, the last case of a top chess player using a smartphone to gain advantage in a tournament occurred in 2015. Georgian grandfather Gaioz Nigalidze was stripped of his title and gave a three-year ban after he was found to have used a chess app during a game in an international tournament in Dubai. Following multiple bath trips during the game, officials checked the cabin and found a hidden phone inside. The device had a chess app that reflects the configuration of the current tab. Officials were able to confirm that the phone belonged to Nigalidze as it was also login in his Facebook account. Updated on 15 July 2019: Added the comment by David Llada Editors' Recommendation
